Floyd was last seen at approximately 8:00 p.m. on February 4, 2004, after his brother dropped him off at his condominium in the vicinity of the 100 block of Lanai Village in Diamondhead, Mississippi. All of his personal belongings, including his two cars, were left behind.

Price's loved ones stated he was in good mental condition at the time of his disappearance.

They believe he may have met with foul play. There was a small spot of blood found in the bathroom after his disappearance, but it is unclear whether it has anything to do with his case.

Price wrote two checks totaling $3,000 to the same person, a car salesman, on the day he went missing; it is unknown whether the transaction had anything to do with his disappearance. The checks were deposited in two different bank accounts, one in Gulfport, Ms and the other in Lafayette, La. Those accounts belonged to the car salesman. The salesman had allegedly phoned the car dealership the day Price disappeared to say he would be late to work that morning, because his wife's car was stuck in the mud.

The car salesman and another man were the only people ever listed as suspects, but aside from an unlikely confession police have little to go on.
Floyd was pretty tight with his money and he wasn't going to give a stranger money.

Vehicle last seen in if any: His 2 cars were left at his Condo.
